CONN BROTHERS.

Live and Let Live Folks.

Farmers have commenced to thresh barley.

Another excursion over this road to Cincinnati last Sunday.

The kiddies are rejoicing over the closing of the school term.

The tourists have commenced their annual Sunday pilgrimages to Crab Orchard Springs.

Wheat harvest begins this week and indications are that the wheat crop is an unusually good one.

Hot weather and disease go hand in hand; look after your defective cess-pool and disinfect your premises.

Two valuable gold watches will be given June 27th, two separate contests one for the girls and one for the boys.

The ice cream supper at Fairview last Saturday night was a great success and netted a neat sum for the church.

Lots of lambs being shipped to the markets from this county, showing that sheep raising is a growing industry in Garrard county.

The two gold watches, to be given to contestants at school auditorium on June 27th, can be seen at Morrow & McRoberts.

The catarrhal fever scare has about blown over in this vicinity and the country people are beginning to come to town as of old.

Surely it is sufficiently late in the season for us to predict a good fruit crop without fear of frost coming and giving our predictions the lie.

Two contests on June 27th, a gold watch will be given to the successful girl and one to the successful boy, on June 27th, separate contest for valuable prizes.

Lots of grieving over the loss of "pet pups", and it is really aggravating to have a good dog to which you have become attached, poisoned by some unscrupulous person.

F. G. Hurt sold his interest in the John K. West lot to his partner H. C. Hamilton, price private. We understand Mr. Hamilton will build a handsome residence on same as this is one of the most desirable lots in the city.

Youthful Prima Donna.

Little Miss Virginia Pearl Walker, the bright little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Walker sang a solo at the musical given last week by Miss Walsh that was the hit of the entire performance. It was very creditable indeed for one of her age and in its rendition she displayed much talent and good training.

The New Paint Lick School Building.

Another Monument To The Cause Of Education In Garrard County.

Above is a splendid likeness of the new Consolidated High School Building at Paint Lick, which is second only to the local school building in appearance, and which is another striking illustration of the rapid growth being made by the cause of education in the county.

Three counties will be represented in declamatory contest, at school auditorium, on June 27th. Reserved seats at McRoberts at 35 cents, general admission 25 cents, children under 12 years 15 cents.

Always Welcome Guest.

Hon. George W. Boner, erstwhile editor, just now politician and always popular, was in Lancaster last week shaking hands with his legion of friends. George is a candidate for representative in Jessamine county, and he says is "a sure winner". We are fond of the gentleman but as he is on the republican ticket, we know Jessamine county too well to accept in toto and without question George's statement in this regard.

Old Land Mark Gone.

The old log house opposite the Methodist church has been torn down and removed, the lot has been graded up almost with a level of the street and will in the near future give place to a dwelling or business house. Mr. L. E. Herron purchased the property recently and made the improvement. This house was known as the "Miss Nannie Letcher property" and was the home of the late Judge B. F. Pherigo.

No Place Like Home.

Mr. W. I. Williams and family, bag and baggage, arrived Sunday morning and from the smiler which wreathed the faces of the entire party, there is no place like Lancaster to them. They are quartered temporarily at the Kennel, but will probably rent property for the summer. Mr. Williams will remain in Lancaster until July 15th and the remainder of the family will be here until the first of September.

Don't Register Right.

The weather vanes on the court house neither of them seem to register correctly, they persist in pointing to the north west, even when a balmy breeze is stirring from the southeast. This matter should be remedied at once as it is liable to cause some fisherman to strike out on a fishing trip when the wind is wrong, which is as every one knows a fatal error. We are going to get old Uncle Step Conn to make us a wind mill for our individual use.

Consistency Thou Art A Virtue.

Some weeks since Ed. Walton in his good paper the Richmond Climax took the Record to task for carrying two heads on the respective sections of several issues, and to avoid the criticism of our discriminating friend, we at once did away with one of our heads. The issue of the Climax of the 17th inst makes its appearance in two sections, and lo and behold, each section has the same identical head. Bro. Walton where is the consistency?

Gov. McCreary Issues Pardon To Man Within Half Hour After His Conviction In The Circuit Court.

Dr. Lucian Treadway was tried in the circuit court here on Wednesday for carrying concealed weapons and was given a fine of $50 and a jail sentence of ten days. He promptly paid the fine together with the costs, and going to a telephone called up Gov. James B. McCreary at Frankfort, and in a very few minutes returned and informed the court that he had been pardoned in so far as the jail sentence was concerned; the Commonwealth's Attorney verified this statement by communicating with the Executive office at Frankfort, and the jail sentence was waived pending the pardon so hastily issued by His Excellency, Gov. James B. McCreary.

Dr. Treadway is a practicing physician and resides at Paint Lick in this county. He has been indicted upon several occasions and for different offenses, and has occasioned the officers of the county no little trouble, but in most instances up to the present occasion he had managed one way and another to compromise, or by some other means evade the punishment for his wrong doing. It was thought this time that he surely would have to suffer the punishment handed out to him, and he would undoubtedly have had to serve his sentence had not Gov. McCreary seen proper to extend Executive clemency to him.

Memorial Tablet To L. Y. Leavell.

It has been suggested by a friend of the late Louis Y. Leavell that a memorial tablet be placed in the new School Building in honor of the man whose generosity rendered the erection of the new building possible. It is appropriate and right. We heartily endorse the plan and would suggest that the children of this district contribute from 10 to 25cts. each for the purpose. Many friends of Louis Leavell would be delighted to contribute.

A suitable tablet could be purchased and placed in the building at moderate cost. Let the good citizens show their love for the honorable, upright citizen who loved this community and wished to leave a legacy that would be a permanent benefit to our community.

Former Resident Of Lancaster Burned To Death In Louisville While Lighting Gasoline Stove.

Ida Bryan, formerly Ida Singleton of this place, and a daughter of Anna Hemphill a well known Lancaster colored woman, was burned to death in Louisville on last Sunday morning while attempting to light a gasoline stove at her home. Her remains were brought here on Tuesday and interred in the Lancaster colored cemetery. The deceased was born and reared in Lancaster and many years ago went to Louisville where she married a well-to-do colored man named Bryan, he being connected with the Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co as a promoter of colored excursions.

Progressive Candidates Of County Make Announcement, And Each Pledges Himself For Fair And Honest Election.

On last Saturday afternoon the County Committee of the Progressive Party of Garrard county, of which G. M. Patterson is Chairman and R. C. Stults secretary met with the Citizens Committee composed of the Ministers of the city, at the latter's request. After hearing the ideas of the ministers as to the holding of a fair primary election, free from any corrupting influence, the Progressive Committee and also the candidates who expect to be voted for by the Progressives at the coming primary, expressed themselves as being in hearty accord and sympathy with the ideas as expressed by the ministers, and each and every one of the candidates pledged themselves to heartily support the said movement. The following candidates whose names will appear upon the ballots at the coming August primary under the device of the Progressive party have signed a pledge binding themselves to support the movement of the Citizens committee, not only throughout the August primary, but through the general election in November, regardless of what the result might be.

The names of the candidates and the office to which they aspire are as follows:-
County Judge, J. B. Bourne.
County Clerk, John M. Duncan.
Sheriff, R. S. Brown.
Jailer, George Anderson.
Assessor, John Green.
Representative, John F. Holtzclaw.

Declamatory Contest.

There are nine entries for the two gold watches June 27th.
The following have announced their subjects:-
Owen Hendren, Lancaster Ky., The plea for Cuban liberty.
Beulah Sutton, Marksbury Ky., Guilty or not guilty.
Mildred K. Beazley, Lancaster Ky., The Swan Song.
Matsy Grimes, Stanford Ky., The Boy's Bear Story.
Alta Hammond, Paint Lick Ky., Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight.
G. C. Bradley, Richmond Ky., The Rag.
Wilco Scanlon, Richmond Ky., The Little Brow Boy.
Frank Tindler, Lancaster Ky., Intemperance.
Sallie Mills Craig, Stanford. Subject not yet announced.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Record appears a short article which was contributed, suggesting a tablet to the memory of the late Lewis Y. Leavell, and which strikes us very forcibly as being a good suggestion. It is true there could be no more fitting memorial to this splendid friend of the cause of education in Garrard county than the handsome new school edifice just completed, which was made possible by his generosity. But it is equally true that there should be somewhere, in some prominent place in that building a tablet to his memory, in order that future generations may be reminded of his munificence.

We are unacquainted as to the cost of such a remembrance, and we have no suggestions to offer as to the manner in which we should raise the fund, but we are inclined to the belief that every child who has profited through his generosity would gladly give, each according to his means, to the erection of a suitable memorial, and if a fund raised in such a manner be not sufficient, we are sure there are any number of people in Lancaster who would gladly supplement the fund and raise a sufficient amount to place in the building a tablet of no men proportion. We very much fear that this duty will devolve upon the Woman's Club, as this is the only organization in Lancaster which ever takes hold of and accomplishes things.

Reversing a case from the Whitley circuit court, the Kentucky court of appeals on Monday held that liquor might be shipped into dry territory, provided it was for personal use and was not for the purpose of sale. While the case was taken up under the Webb Kenyon act, the court did not attempt to construe this measure, satisfying itself with simply construing the Kentucky law applying in the case at bar, under which the case had been placed by the Webb-Kenyon bill, which simply strips a shipment of its interstate qualities and makes of it an intrastate shipment.

L. & N. Officials On Tour Of Inspection.

Messrs W. H. Anderson, Thomas Walker, M. Stamler, Morris Kellar and Mr. Freindburg passed through Lancaster on last Thursday, making a stop of several hours. These gentlemen are all officials of the local division of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and were on their annual tour of inspection. The Park now under construction passed in review before their eyes, and several other improvements which might be made to great advantage were brought to their attention. Mr. Anderson, the Sup't is a clever and accommodating gentleman, as are those who accompanied him and they may be depended upon to do anything asked of them in the way of improvements, provided of course that it will redound to the interest of their company.

The Climax Takes A Crack At Us.

Ed Walton, who is about as good a judge of a news item as there is in the state, has the following to say in his paper, the Richmond Climax, of the telegrams sent from here to the daily papers:

The Lancaster Record complains of a scarcity of salt in that city. If the good paper wants to salt down those "fresh" items the correspondents for city papers are sending out from the "Land of Now" the Climax will see that it gets a barrel or so p. d. q.

Surely Ed knows the Record reads too well to even dream that a member of its staff would be guilty of such work. By the way Ed, did you notice in the daily papers of the 17th an account of the burning of the depot at Rowland which occurred on the 14th, inst under a Lancaster date line, of course.

Paul Miller Married.

Lieutenant John Paul Miller, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Miller of this place arrived here on last Sunday evening for a visit to his parents and other friends and relatives. Paul brought with him his bride of a week, who was Miss Grace Seagrave of New York, to whom he was married on June 7th, and who certainly speaks well for the discriminating taste of this worthy young man. After a week's visit to Lancaster they will go to Louisville where they will make a short stay with his sister Mrs. R. E. Hughes, after which they will go to San Francisco, from which point they will sail on July 5th for Guam, which is one of the Ladrone islands, belonging to the United States, having been ceded to them at the close of the Spanish-American war. Guam is 900 miles from Manila and 2000 miles from Honolulu, and is an important station on the route from this country to the Philippines. Mr. Miller is a Lieutenant in the United States Navy, he was born and raised in Lancaster, and his host of friends here are proud of his successful career and tender him their sincerest congratulations upon the winning of such a winsome bride.

A New Lawyer.

Mr. John M. Quinn one of the gifted young sons of the good county of Laurel, came down Monday and on Tuesday was examined by a committee of local attorneys for law license. The young gentleman passed a very creditable examination and was admitted to the bar, and as he is a young man of splendid literary attainments, deeply learned in the law, and a natural born orator, we predict for him unlimited success in his chosen profession. Mr Quinn's home is at Livingston.

Politics Warming Up In The County And Expected To Occupy The Limelight From Now Until The August Primary.

Toward the latter part of last week the weather continued to grow warmer and the local political situation seemed to be in thorough sympathy with climatic conditions. On Saturday afternoon a great many more people were in town than on the previous court day, and politics was the sole topic of conversation. The various democratic candidates, the successful of whom will of course be the successful ones for the second time in November, were urging their particular fitness upon the constituency, and every candidate for every office from the lowest to the highest was putting in his best ticks. The republican committee held a meeting to devise ways and means for placing a ticket in the field; and we are reliably informed that the "old guard" will have a full ticket in the field for their adherents to vote for in November. The Progressives were also in session and finally determined upon a number of their candidates, a full list of whom will be found in this issue of the Record.

June Term Of The Garrard Circuit Court Began Monday With An Unusually Light Docket.

The June term, which is like the others a three weeks term, of the Garrard Circuit Court began here on last Monday; Judge Charles A. Hardin was on hand early to preside, as was Judge E. V. Puryear, who with County Attorney J. E. Robinson will look after the interest of the Commonwealth; Circuit Clerk W. B. Mason with Miss Sue Shelby Mason as his deputy presided at the books, while Sheriff George Ballard was present with Messrs C. A. Robinson, Tommie Ballard and Davis Sutton to assist him. The docket was an unusually light one, and Judge Hardin hopes to do some good work toward the complete clearing of it this court. There are 75 old equity cases, 25 old common law cases, 16 common law appearance cases and 20 equity appearances.

The criminal docket speaks exceedingly well for the moral condition of the county, and is unusually light and will be pretty well disposed of at this term of court.

Judge Hardin gave to the grand jury his usual forceful instruction, dwelling at length upon violations of the election laws and the fish and game laws, and touching upon every law which he thought might be violated in the county, instructing them to diligently search into such infractions and if the evidence coming before them justified it, to return a true bill in each and every case without fear or favor.

The grand jury is as follows: N. J. Gosney, Foreman John Tribble, F. W. Montgomery J. M. Mount J. M. Sanders A. W. Kavanaugh J. H. Posey L. G. Davidson G. D. Robinson R. K. Speaks J. Wade Walker Virgil Scott

Clean Up The Town, Both As To Sanitation And For The Purpose Of Improving Its Appearance.

Lancaster is a small place, and as such it should be an easy matter to keep it clean, both as to sanitation and as to beautifying. In this article will probably be seen some suggestions which have appeared in these columns before, but we will allow the fact that they are good suggestions be an apology for their frequent appearance.

The appearance of really warm weather brings forcibly to our minds the necessity for the very strongest kind of sanitary measures, and the fact that the laws of sanitation are not being lived up to as they should be is a self evident fact; a ramble up and down some of the principal thoroughfares will soon convince you, your olfactory organs will be assailed with various odors, from the neglected cess-pool to the decaying manure heap and the over ripe pig sty, such and every one of them a disease breeder of the most dangerous type. These things should be attended to, and at once; if their owners do not and will not give them the proper attention for the sake of their own health, then for the protection of the neighbors and the community at large, the Board of Health, that body whose authority has such wide scope, should take the matter in hand promptly and see that the city's health is safeguarded. One defective cess-pool may start an epidemic of disease in Lancaster that will cost many precious lives, all of which might have been avoided at a very trivial cost and with the performance of a very small amount of labor. A manure heap, such as may be found in the rear of some of our citizens' stables, yes and those stables opening into alleys within a block of the public square, will breed a sufficient number of disease spreading flies that all the "swatters" in the world would not be able to exterminate before the coming of cold weather. Such conditions actually exist in Lancaster, and too, after all of which has been said and done since the coming of the spring and summer to stimulate the people to observe sanitary measures against the probable coming of disease. We are of the opinion that it is time such things were abated, that those who will not do these things for their own good and for the protection of the community, should be made to do so. Already diphtheria has made its appearance, and after you or yours have been stricken with this terrible disease will be too late to repair the cess pool or take the precautions that you know you should have taken, and you will be as guilty, as responsible for the damage wrought as if you had used an ax. Don't put it off another day, if you have failed to take the proper precautions, if there is anything about your premises which is dangerous to the health of your family or that of your neighbor, see that it is looked after AT ONCE.

Another thing we will mention at the risk of being called persistent in the matter, is the blockading of the alleys of the town; many of these secondary thoroughfares are almost entirely impassable, especially after night, when it is actually dangerous to attempt to walk through one of them for the fear of coming in contact with a sharp rod projecting from some piece of machinery, an old wagon or some piece of junk which has been placed there to "get it out of the way". The eventual outcome of this negligence and careless ness will be that some one will be injured, the town will be sued and a heavy judgment will be added to the already heavy burden which the taxpayer is carrying, and all because of the negligence of someone whom the city authorities have allowed, or failed to prevent from blockading one of the thoroughfares of the city. The city may be going upon the theory that "sufficient to the day is the evil thereof", but such a theory will most surely prove an expensive one.

Buy Raspberries by the crate. Curry's

The good people of Stanford who have been so long cursed with the liquor traffic, have determined that it shall stop, and are making heroic efforts to enforce the local option laws and effectually put to an end the illicit sale of liquor in their city. The officers, both city and county are lending to this effort every assistance in their power, but the bootleggers are persistent and adopt every conceivable means for slipping booze in for the purpose of sale. On last Sunday night Sheriff McCarthy and deputy Embury, Jailer Dink Farmer, and Marshal Bony Carter came to Lancaster in an automobile for the purpose of boarding the excursion returning from Cincinnati and catching a number of the most notorious bootleggers who were known to have gone on that train for supplies. They secured the assistance of Chief Herron and with him boarded the train, which arrived here between 2 and 3 o'clock Monday morning, each of the officers stationed himself at one of the doors of the coaches, the negroes they sought were readily located and seemed to be well heeled with refreshments. But no sooner did the officers make their appearance than a perfect fusillade of bottles of beer and whiskey began to pour from the windows of the train, and many quarts of the contraband goods was picked up between this place and Rowland. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Herron informs us that he heard that the officers succeeded in capturing a truck load of beer and whiskey upon the arrival of the train in Stanford. The object of the Lincoln county officers in coming here to board the train was to prevent their prospective prisoners from leaving the train at some suburban station and walking in to town to evade them.

Burton Boys All Have Cars.

Messrs Robert and Richard Burton, both of the county, have followed in the wake of their brother Will and are both possessors of handsome automobiles, having each recently purchased new machines of the Buick pattern.

Ralston Case Today.

The case of the Commonwealth against Thomas Ralston, charged with murder was set for trial in the circuit court Wednesday, but after exhausting the regular panel without obtaining a jury, Judge Hardin ordered a special venire of 50 men to be summoned to appear on this (Thursday) morning from which to select a jury, after which the trial will proceed and will in all probability consume the remainder of the week.

Corn Growing Nicely.

A good many of the farmers of the county were heard to complain that the recent cool weather had turned corn blades white, caused them to have the appearance of having been frost bitten. However, since the advent of warmer weather the corn has assumed its normal condition, shows no bad results from the cool snap, is growing nicely and is well up to its average condition at this time of year, with promise of a splendid crop should conditions prove favorable from now until its maturing time.

Annual Inspection Of Local Chapter Royal Arch Masons.

Hon. M. H. Davis of Paris Ky., acting under orders from the Grand Chapter of Ky' R. A. M. came down on last Monday and inspected the local chapter on Monday evening. As usual the Lancaster chapter was pronounced to be in first class condition and the work put on for the benefit of the Inspector was pronounced by him to be fully up to the standard. After the inspection and the business incident thereto was finished, delightful refreshments consisting of raspberries, ice cream, cake and lemonade were served in the apartments of the order.

Stanford People Determined To Stop Illicit Sale Of Liquor And Taking Heroic Measures With That End In View.

The good people of Stanford who have been so long cursed with the liquor traffic, have determined that it shall stop, and are making heroic efforts to enforce the local option laws and effectually put to an end the illicit sale of liquor in their city. STOP.

Do you know that the last Kentucky Legislature by the creation of numerous and superfluous offices and appropriations, increased the State debt to over 24 millions dollars.

Do you know that it wanted to levy an additional 5 per cent tax on the hundred dollars worth of property to build turnpikes in the mountains.

Do you know that it increased the number of House officials some 25 or 30 beyond the requirements of the constitution.

Do you know that it passed a law making the state pay the premiums on the bonds of the state, officials which the Court of Appeals has decided unconstitutional.

Do you know that the papers of the state are discussing the advisability of increasing your tax rate from 50cts. to 75cts. on the one hundred dollars.

Do you know that I tender my services to sing at funerals free of charge.

Do you know that there is scarcely a member of the last legislature but what has opposition for re-election and that the county papers of the state are praying for a deliverance from another legislature like the last one.

THINK.

Do you want to send a representative who will endeavor to lower your tax rate.

Do you want to send a representative who will cut off the useless officials and make those left, work harder for their pay.

Do you want to send a representative who advocates and will fight for a more equal distribution of state taxation.

Do you want to send a representative who will have the courage to not vote for an appropriation because some high official wants it done.

Do you want to send a representative who will have the nerve to fight a bill created for some broken down politician or political parasite.

Do you want to send a representative who will not have the gall to denounce that grand, safe and courageous christian statesman, Wm. J. Bryan as a marplot, a demagogue and a trickster in politics.

Do you want to send a representative who will represent the interests of the people of Garrard county and not the whim of some ambitious or vainglorious politician.

If you will elect me I will be on hand promptly every time the "cock crows" watching and fighting for your interests and I tender my services to sing at all funerals without pay.

LISTEN.

If you elect me I will not vote for any appropriation not absolutely necessary to pay the expenses of running the state Government. What I mean by necessary expenses, is, the Asylums, Deaf & Dumb, Feeble Minded, Lunatic, and the salaries of state officials.

The farmers are now paying two thirds of the state taxes, which is unjust and outrageous, and can be relieved very materially by making the corporations of all kinds pay their just portions of the taxes.

So far as capacity and energy will allow, I will be your PUBLIC SERVANT, watching, fighting for and safeguarding the interests of the people of Garrard county at all times.

Again I tender my services to sing at all funerals, putting them on the free list.

I will talk to the voters at the following places: Bryantsville Saturday June 21st 3 P. M.; Bourne, June 21st at night 7:30; Paint Lick June 28th 3 P. M.; Lowell at night 7:30; McCrasy July 5th 3 P. M.; Herrings School House July 5th 7:30 P. M.; Marksburg July 12th 7:30 P. M.; Marcellus July 12th, 3 P. M. and at the Court House in Lancaster July 28th at 3 P. M.

My opponent is respectfully asked to be present, for I propose to discuss his record as your representative. Resp't. J. R. Mount.

GOVERNOR JAMES B. M'CREARY ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR

"To the Democrats of Kentucky:

"I did not expect to be a candidate again for office, and have so stated, but hundreds of Democrats have, by letter and in person, stated to me that my obligations to the people and the interests of the Democratic party, to which I have belonged all my life, require that I should be a candidate for United States senator; and when the statements of my friends are added to my desire to be of service to Kentucky and to the United States, I have decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator at the primary election to be held in August, 1914, and, if nominated, submit my candidacy to the people of Kentucky at the November election, 1914.

"I delayed the announcement of my candidacy because I believed the seventeenth amendment to the constitution of the United States would be ratified and made a part of the constitution, and United States senators would be elected by direct vote of the people.

"This amendment to the constitution, for which I voted three times while a member of congress, is very important to me, because the primary election will not occur until August, 1914, and the election of United States senator will not occur until November, 1914, only a few months before my term as governor expires; and, if nominated and elected senawhole life as a faithful, working Democrat. My Republican opponents, when I was a candidate for governor, examined my record as legislator, congressman and governor, with close and careful scrutiny, and found no blemish.

"For my achievements as a Democrat I could point to as many important bills which I introduced and passed in the legislature of Kentucky and in the congress of the United States as any other member of either body, but I must not make this announcement too lengthy, and I will show this hereafter, if necessary.

"It is proper, however, for me to say that in my canvass for governor I promised, if elected, I would obtain legislation for better educational facilities, better roads, safer banking system with bank inspectors, lower insurance, adequate forestry laws to protect our forests and encourage tree-planting, a tuberculosis commission to protect the health of the people, provide for the passage of a local option bill so as to take this important question out of politics, and also restore the geological survey so as to exhibit the soils, minerals, geological formations and attractions of Kentucky; and, in order to fulfill these promises, I was active in my aid in enacting the following progressive and necessary legislation:

Progressive Legislation.

"A safe and competent banking department with a commissioner and tor, I can serve my full term as governor before I take the office of senator.

Thinks Election Sure.

"Another very important matter to be considered is that Democrats of Kentucky should nominate a candidate for United States senator who will certainly be elected at the November election, 1914.

"At the last presidential election Woodrow Wilson only carried the state of Kentucky by a majority of 1,300 over the combined Republican vote for Taft and Roosevelt, without considering the 14,000 votes cast for the Socialist and Prohibition candidates. The Republicans will be sure to find a candidate upon whom the Taft Republicans and the Roosevelt Republicans can unite, and unless the Democratic candidate can secure the full vote of the Democratic party, a Republican will be elected to the United States senate from Kentucky November, 1914. As I was elected governor of the state of Kentucky in 1911 by 31,000 majority, and also overcame a Republican majority of 18,000, I feel that I can state with certainty that if I am nominated I will be elected United States senator.

"I claim nothing for having helped to redeem Kentucky from Republican rule, although it was the longest and most arduous campaign in which I ever participated and my opponent was proclaimed by Republicans as their inevitable candidate. I rendered Democratic service in opposing him, which I have freely rendered in many campaigns for nearly 40 years, and I am proud of the results and thankful to the Democrats of Kentucky for the earnest and united support with which they honored me.

Fidelity and Achievement.

"Every candidate, when he asks for further honor and support, should be able to point to fidelity to duty and to achievements made for his party in his state and in his country.

"For fidelity to duty I point to my three inspectors, maintained at the expense of the banks.

"A department of public roads, with state commissioner and engineer in each county; the expense to be paid by a tax on automobiles.

"A game and fish commission, which is more than self-sustaining.

"A geological department to do justice to our geological formations, soils, mineral resources, iron ore, coal, etc., which is supported to a great extent by an annual appropriation of $10,000 co-operation fund furnished by the federal government.

"A forestry department to preserve our forests and restore to forests the burnt-over and cut-over districts; paid for, to a great extent, by cooperation of the United States government with our state government.

"A state insurance rating board to regulate and reduce the rates of insurance; the expense to be borne by the insurance company.

"A state board of tuberculosis commissioners to look after the health of the people and guard against the ravages of the terrible disease of tuberculosis in all of its forms.

"In addition to these useful commissions or departments, mostly self-sustaining and without cost to the state, I co-operated with the members of the senate and house of representatives in complying with the declarations of our state platform by passing a county unit bill.

"I co-operated with the members of the general assembly in establishing prison reforms promised by our platform, which were so much needed, and now the penitentiaries of the state are under the management of men not elected by political influence, but appointed by the governor, and the people and the press speak well of the wardens and of the general management of the state prisons.

Primary Election Laws.

"A direct primary election law was also enacted, under which all officers to be elected by the people are required to be nominated on the first Saturday in August each year preceding the regular election, at the expense of the state, and no measure was ever passed that will more effectively put the political boss out of business and go further towards securing clean, fair elections.

"Educational bills that will help to stamp out illiteracy in Kentucky were enacted, and I will always remember with pleasure my assistance and cooperation with the members of the last general assembly, whose usefulness and whose real benefit to the state have never been exceeded in my day by the members of any legislature.

Corporation Assessments.

"Equally important with the fulfillment of platform pledges is a fair and just increase of the taxable value of corporations. I co-operated with the board of assessment and valuation, and the members of this board, after careful, capable and thorough examination, fixed the franchise value of railroads and other corporations. The railroads are now resisting the fair and just assessment made by the board, but I believe the board will be sustained and upheld by the courts and the bureau of taxation will be put jointly on corporations and on individuals, and in reasonable time will pay the state's indebtedness, and, I hope, justify a reduction of state taxes.

"The last legislature authorized the appointment of a commission on revenue and taxation. That commission has been appointed and is doing good work and will make an important and beneficial report at the end of the present year, which report will be laid by me before the legislature.

"The state constitutional amendment on the subject of taxation, which many persons advocated, has been submitted to, and will be voted upon by the people at the next regular election. If adopted it will enable the members of our general assembly to impose a greater tax on corporations.

Republican Debts.

"When I was inaugurated as governor I found Republicans had put a debt on the state amounting to about a million and a quarter dollars, and as it has been repeatedly published that the appropriations made by the first legislature of the present administration were greater than the appropriations made by the first legislature of the preceding Republican administration, I requested the auditor to furnish me a statement showing the expenditures made in the respective years referred to. The appropriations made by the first legislature under the administration, which came into power in 1908, amounted to $1,389,021.63; the appropriations made by the first legislature of my administration, in 1912, as shown by the signed statement of the auditor, amounted to $75,244.68, which shows that the appropriations made the first year of my administration did not sum up one-half as much as the appropriations made by the preceding Republican administration.

"Meeting Current Expenses. "I am hopeful that, at the end of the present fiscal year, we will be able to show, leaving out the interest on the state debt, accumulated during Republican rule, that the revenues of the state this year will about pay its indebtedness for the present fiscal year. Kentucky is in debt, and we all regret it. Many of our sister states are also in debt far in excess of Kentucky. Even the new state of Oklahoma has a debt at present of over six millions of dollars. I am now endeavoring and will do all in my power to cut down expenses and inaugurate retrenchment and reform.

"In conclusion, I wish to say the people of Kentucky have tried me and have known me long enough to judge of my Democracy and to understand that I believe the success of the Democratic party in Kentucky is paramount to my success; and while I pledge myself to support, actively, any of my opponents who may be nominated for United States senator, if that should occur, I will, all the time, uphold and advocate the last state Democratic platform of Kentucky, and also the national Democratic platform, adopted by the 1912 Baltimore convention, and will try to be conspicuous, if I am elected United States senator, in earnestly assisting our able and faithful Democratic president in carrying out the pledges made in the national Democratic convention.

Will Canvass Voters.

"The verdict of the voters of the United States in the last presidential election must be upheld. The people must rule. Monopolies must be destroyed. The power of special interests must be destroyed. The unjust burden of tariff taxes must be removed. The currency laws must be revised and made more beneficial and suitable for the people. And all other just and needed reforms, set forth in the national Democratic platform, must be complied with.

"As it is more than one year before the primary election is held, in which a United States senator will be nominated, I shall not commence a speaking canvass for several months, and will devote my time to the discharge of my official duties as governor. At the proper time, however, I shall speak to the people in every part of the state.

"I have had long training in public affairs and know the needs of Kentucky and the United States. My long experience in national legislation will enable me, if elected, to render good and efficient service as soon as I commence to discharge the duties of United States senator, and my heart will be full of gratitude to all who support me.

"JAMES B. M'CREARY."

UNCONSCIOUS GOOD

By F. A. MITCHELL

I am an artist by profession, and when I was struggling for recognition it occurred to me that I should paint one picture in which I should put something sufficiently notable to give me a reputation. Being a painter of face and figure, I naturally looked about for a model. I found subjects in determination, in grace and other features, in figures, but I needed a face to go with each, and that I did not find.

When I moved into a new studio I looked out upon a court. The rooms facing me were occupied by offices of various kinds, and I could look into those on the same plane with me or a little below. The first morning I occupied my studio I saw through a window opposite a youth some sixteen or seventeen years old sitting at a typewriter. I was impressed with his appearance at once. His face expressed honesty, principle, goodness. His profile, which was usually toward me, was beautiful, and his full face, which he often turned to look at his copy, was also beautiful, and each seemed to indicate that the young man contained within him elements to fit him for some noble work.

Here was what I had been long looking for. I did not care to copy his features exactly. What I wanted to put on the canvas was that nobleness, that goodness, expressed in his face. This I succeeded in doing beyond my most ardent expectations.

Before beginning to paint the picture, thinking of the subject I should choose for it, I was disposed to represent my model as doing some kindly act, but I finally concluded to paint him as he was—a typist. If, I argued, the goodness stands out in him on the canvas as a typist, how much more will he be the triumph than if I represent him as a "good Samaritan!" We expect goodness in the faces of those who profess to be good, but do not necessarily look for it in those engaged in ordinary occupations.

My picture passed the hanging committee of a certain gallery in which I was anxious to place it, and on the opening day I took a seat in the room where it was hung to watch its effect on the persons who passed it. There were pictures in the gallery by well known artists, and most visitors were looking for such. Nevertheless the gazers gave at least a glance to all there were, and as most of them passed my picture they stopped for a few moments and looked at it. There seemed to be something near home in the subject, to say nothing of the individuality of the person depicted. But this was my own surmise.

I visited the gallery nearly every day and noticed a slowly growing interest in my picture. At last I saw persons who on coming into the room where it was hung looked about them evidently for some particular picture and finally found it in mine. This told me that it had begun to be talked about. Before the exhibition closed the picture as well as the artist had made some reputation.

It was about five years after this that a young man attracted attention by conversing his life to the poor. He belonged to no organization and had no means of his own, but he soon found backers among wealthy persons who gave him money for his good works. It was not long before he was known throughout the land as one absolutely pure, noble and doing a good work.

Having heard of him and conceived a desire to see him, I called at his office—a shabby room in a rookery—with the ostensible purpose of making an offering for his work. What was my astonishment to see a man rise to receive me whom I recognized at once as the model for my picture. I made no mention of the coincidence; simply giving him the money I had brought and trespassing for a short while upon his duties in order to converse with him.

I made several visits to my model on one pretense or another and attempted to induce him to go with me to see the picture I had made of him when he was a typist. He was so busy that it was a long while before I could secure the time necessary for the purpose. At last I succeeded, and he went with me to where the painting hung. I had not told him that I was the artist. He stood for a long while looking at it intently, so intently that I expected when he spoke he would say, "That is myself shortly before I came of age." At last I broke in upon his feelings, his meditations or whatever they were by asking him what he thought of the picture.

"I have not thought of it as a work of art," he said. "I have been thinking how I would rejoice could I have within me one-tenth the nobility of soul expressed by that young man."

I was astonished. He had sat before a typewriter himself; he had been the model for the figure in the painting which had only approached that nobility of soul he mentioned, and yet he saw no likeness whatever to himself. Should I tell him the truth? No. It was better that he should not know it. Better that not a grain of alloy should enter into his unconscious goodness. I led him away from the picture without enlightening him. He went back to his work of succoring the unfortunate, no doubt nerved to greater exertion by having seen a portrayal of a good soul without recognizing it as his own.

Best Laxative For The Aged.

Old men and women feel the need of a laxative more than young folks, but it must be safe and harmless and one which will not cause pain. Dr. King's New Life Pills are especially good for the aged, for they act promptly and easily, easily. Price 25c. Recommended by R. E. McRoberts & Son.

"Clincher" Paint

We know a paint which holds to the wood like a driven nail. Seasoned lumber is porous. The pores are the empty sap-cells. White lead paint, which dries on the wood in the form of a solid, elastic film, fastens into these pores, and the whole coat of paint is actually riveted like armor-plate to the surface it decorates and protects.

The Proof Is Here The Same As Every-where.

For those who seek relief from kidney backache, weak kidneys, bladder ills, Doan's Kidney Pills offer hope of relief and the proof is here in Lancaster, the same as everywhere. Lancaster people have used Doan's, the kidney remedy used in America for fifty years. Why run the risk of dangerous kidney ills—fatal Bright's disease. Here's Lancaster proof. Investigate it.

W. M. Zanone, Campbell & Crab Orchard Sts., Lancaster, Ky, says: "My kidneys were disordered and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage and contained sediment. I had pains in my back and sides and when I stooped, I had difficulty in straightening. Finally, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they completely relieved me."

The Supremacy of Verse.
Gray's "Elegy" was not much esteemed by its author, who in one of his letters said that "the public would have received it as well had it been written in prose." The poet was a poor critic, for the third line of the first stanza achieves the supremacy of verse. There can scarcely be another to equal it in English literature. "The plowman homeward plods his weary way." Now, that line is such a supreme verse that you may recite it this way and that and it is still as good as ever:

The weary plowman homeward plods his way.
Homeward the weary plowman plods his way.
Weary, the plowman homeward plods his way.
The plowman, weary, plods his homeward way.
Homeward the plowman plods his weary way.
The plowman plods his weary homeward way.
And so on. But if it is not poetry it is the supremacy of verse—London Chronicle.

The Split Log Drag.
The split log is due to the ingenuity of a Missouri farmer, who, to improve the condition of the highway between his farm and the neighboring village, devised a rude contrivance to smooth the rough places and round up the surface from the ditch to the center so as to drain off the water. This device was most simple since it consisted of a log split into two equal parts, with a few bines between them and a chain by which the horses hauled the drag. It was tried after a rain when the road was soft, and it worked so well that its fame soon traveled far and wide. This was the beginning of the split log drag, the improved form of which any farmer can make in a short time. It has revolutionized the work of maintaining dirt roads, work which had always been expensive and ineffective.—Harper's Weekly.

Fried Salt Herring.
When Kipling wrote about east and west never meeting he might, with almost equal truth, have made it north and south. England and Scotland have their own national idiosyncrasies, particularly about cookery, and they won't mix. North of the Tweed it is rare in the extreme to find a man or woman who will eat eels, and south of it haggis has never succeeded in making itself a popular dish. Then there is salt herring. I heard lately of an English lady resident in Glasgow who went home to London on a holiday, taking with her, as a distinctive Scottish delicacy, a keg of Loch Fyne herring. To please her the Londoners tried to eat them, boiled, as they ought to be. But it was no good. They wouldn't go down. So after that they had them fried, and I understand the keg was finished.—Glasgow News.

On a Needle Point.
Indirectly Pasteur solved the famous medieval problem, "How many angels can stand on the point of a needle?" Sir W. Crookes said that altering the word "angels" to "devils" he had found that of one of the deadliest diseases that had ever scourged mankind 500 of the malignant microbes—veritable devils—could, without overcrowding, find place on the point of the finest needle.

Not Worthless.
Patience—Why, her husband is absolutely worthless. Patience—Oh, you shouldn't say that! You know it has been proved that a man weighing 150 pounds contains enough grease to make seventy-five candles and a pound of soap.—Yonkers Statesman.

A Real Hero.
From boyhood every man wears in his heart the image of his ideal woman. Then he marries the substitute. eats her burnt biscuits and says nothing.—Florida Times-Union.

Simply Didn't Do It.
Mother—Now, Willie, tell me the truth. You forgot to wash your face this morning, didn't you? Willie—No, mother, honest, I didn't forget.—Judge

Your confidence is what Studebaker seeks to keep

Possessing this confidence, we have never tried to produce a cheap wagon. We could, but we don't dare try the experiment. Our constant aim has been to produce the best wagon.

And in living up to this highest standard, we have won and hold—the confidence and good-will of hundreds of thousands of farmers all over the world.

Studebaker wagons are built to last, to do a day's work every day, to stand up under stress and strain and to make the name Studebaker stand for all that is best in vehicles.

Don't accept any other wagon represented to be just as good as a Studebaker. The substitute may be cheaper, but it isn't up to Studebaker standards, and you can't afford to buy it.

For business or pleasure, there is a Studebaker vehicle suited to your requirements. Farm wagons, trucks, business wagons, surreys, buggies, runabouts, pony carriages—each the best of its kind. Harness also—of the same high Studebaker standard.

MASTIC PAINT

A Lesson in Real Economy

Take two houses—both alike—
Spend about $50 to MASTIC-PAINT one—
Let the other go unpainted—

Offer them both for sale—
You'll wonder why the unpainted house finds no buyer at even $500 less than the MASTIC-PAINTED house will bring.

At the beginning both houses represented equal value.

The Lesson: A few gallons of MASTIC PAINT properly applied at the right time greatly increases the value of your property.

Your building needs painting Right Now, but don't use keg-lead or hand-mixed paints. It may be cheaper at the start, but is costly and unsatisfactory in the end.

Difference In Methods

So far as doing some kinds of business, the bee hasn't any advantage over the yellow-jacket. They are both "warm numbers" especially when they sit down—as the boy said.

The difference in their methods is what causes the bee to be pampered and petted and provided with a nice little ready-made store house by man, while everybody "swatts" the yellow-jacket. Any chump can tell you the reason. It is because the yellow-jacket is shiftless, while the bee SAVES. Moral—Start a bank account at our bank.

A Message From the Dead

By RUTH GRAHAM

Mark Hutton and his dog were walking along a road between his farm and the home of Jennie Mills, to whom he was engaged to be married. Looking through an avenue of trees ahead, he saw a man coming carrying a shotgun. As the man approached Mark's brow lowered. He recognized the corner as Leonard Sweetser, the only enemy he had in the world. Sweetser was one of those men born bad. He had had a trade with Hutton and vowed Hutton had swindled him. This led to bad blood between them. Hutton avoided his enemy as far as possible, for he was a sensible man and disliked to have trouble with any one. Indeed, Sweetser's accusation had caused him a great deal of misery.

Sweetser stopped, raised his weapon and fired, presumably at a bird flying between him and Hutton. Hutton fell dead.

Sweetser at once changed his direction and, skulking into a wood, disappeared.

Jennie Mills, who was expecting Mark Hutton to tea, looked out of the window and saw a black cloud rising in the west.

"I hope Mark will come before that storm breaks," she said to herself. "It looks awful."

The storm came, but Mark did not. Suddenly a wind dashed itself against the house like a monster wave of the sea. Though the sun had not yet set, it was dark as midnight. In the midst of the turmoil of wind and hail and the vivid flash of lightning, the crash of thunder, there came a ring at the telephone. Had Jennie not been near it she would not have heard. Going to the instrument, she took up the receiver.

"Jennie!"

"Oh, Mark, where are you? I was afraid you were out in the storm."

It was Leonard Sweetser. At that moment there came a gust of wind that shook the house so violently that Jennie feared it would be blown down over her head. It drowned any further word that might have come to her, but she held the receiver to her ear, waiting for a lull in the fierceness of the storm. But the lull came without bringing anything more from Mark. She called, but there was no answer. She answered through the instrument the wind crying in the telephone wires, but no sound of a human voice.

Then it began to grow light. The storm departed as suddenly as it had come. The sun came out, and the birds began to sing.

But where was Mark?

Regardless of the rivulets of rain and the soft wet ground, Jennie started down the road. The telephone message had indicated that Mark was under cover, but she wondered why she had heard that unearthly wail of the wind through the telegraph wires. She sped on regardless of the streams of water flowing here and there over the road.

At last she heard the rattle of a dog. It was Mark's dog Zip. She would know it among a hundred barks. But now it was rather a cry than a bark. She ran now, for she was oppressed by a great dread. Presently she came in sight of the dog. He was sitting beside something that looked like a log on the ground and howling, with his face turned up to the sky. She ran on. Then when she realized what the log was she staggered on till she came to Mark's body.

A month passed. Only one arrest had been made for the murder of Mark Hutton, and that was Leonard Sweetser. But there was no evidence against him except that he had been known to be at enmity with the man whose body had been found at the base of a telegraph pole with a bullet hole in his head. Besides, it was said that Sweetser could prove an alibi. He would not have been tried had it not been that Jennie Mills insisted upon it. When he heard that she believed him guilty and the neighbors sympathized with her in her belief he asked for a trial. No one had come forward who claimed to have seen the murder done. Sweetser asked for the trial in order that he might be vindicated.

When it came off Jennie sat among the spectators. She had taken Zip home with her the day she discovered Mark's body and had kept him with her ever since. She had him in court with her, but kept him at her feet. When the prisoner was brought in and arraigned she took the dog up in her lap, then lifted him with his face to Sweetser.

With a leap Zip jumped from her hands, over those intervening between him and the culprit and, running to him, jumped as high as he could and, fixing his teeth in his coat, lunged there. This was all the evidence there was against Sweetser, but it was enough to establish his guilt, though not enough to convict him in a court of law. When Jennie was asked if she had any testimony to give she replied, "None that a jury would regard, but I know he was guilty before the dog gave his unanswerable testimony."

It was impossible to convict the prisoner for want of evidence which a judge would admit, but the vindication that was expected by him was not forthcoming.

Sweetser was discharged, but a committee of Mark Hutton's friends was supposed to have made away with him. At any rate what became of him remained a secret.

GINGER OR NO GINGER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

It was one night years ago, when Liverpool was an innocent village of thirty houses, that Adiniron Tompkins and Moses Wheeler were among the men loafing at the postoffice and Adiniron bimeby mentioned that his wife was going to bake pumpkin pies on the morrow and that he must buy 5 cents' worth of ginger to season with.

"You don't tell me that you put ginger in pumpkin pies?" says Moses.

"Of course."

"What for?"

"To add to their goodness."

"But it don't add to their goodness—not with folks who've got more taste than a cow! It's all a fool business, and where it started from I don't know. A pumpkin pie is a pumpkin pie, and you can't neither make gingerbread nor bean soup out of it."

His words made Adiniron mad, and the two had a jaw lastin' fur half an hour. As both were church members they didn't come to blows, but they were never to be good friends ag'in. The next time they met Moses Wheeler tried to look as mean as he could and stuck up his nose and said:

"Waal, Adiniron, are you turnin' out many pumpkin pies with skunk's cabbage for seasonin' nowdays?"

"Not many, Moses," said Adiniron, with a glint in his eye, "only jest 'nuff to feed the town fool on."

That was the way the thing went on. After three years of argument and dispute Moses weakened enough to say that a little nutmeg grated into pumpkin helped the taste of the pie, but he wouldn't yield a hair's breadth on ginger. If there was a huskin' bee, a barn raisin' or log rollin' them two men was allis there, and jest as soon as they sighted each other the dispute began. It finally split up the town into gingerites and nutmegites, and there was a heap of hard feelin's. At various times the ministers tried to bring about a reconciliation. They'd go to Adiniron and ask him for the good of the community to weaken on his ginger, and they'd go to Moses and tell him that if the spire of the Baptist church was ever to be finished he'd got to let pumpkin pies go and talk of doughnuts or turnovers. Both men would think it over and promise and agree and shake hands the next time they met and call it all off. They'd meet at the postoffice, and they'd shake hands and pretend to be sorry, but it wouldn't be two minits before Adiniron would say:

"Moses, I reckon you've heard of that fellow Milton, who wrote 'Paradise Lost'?"

"Of course."

"Mighty smart man, wasn't he?"

"You bet."

"Waal, his wife used ginger in her pumpkin pies!"

That would bust everything up ag'in, and the old quarrel would be resumed, and probably at the next prayer meetin' Moses would ask heaven to bear with them of depraved tastes, and Adiniron would appeal that them who didn't know nuttin' shouldn't be cut off in their ignorance like a green bass-wood tree.

It was only a few nights ago that the end came. Both men had got old and feeble and illin' in body, but their minds was still as hard as ever. Adiniron had been talkin' most all day with a windmill man, and Moses had had a tin peddler at his house over night, and both had got a heap of new information. When they sauntered into the postoffice at 7 o'clock Adiniron puts on a grin and says:

"Moses, you've heard of them pyramids of Egypt, I reckon?"

"Know 'em like a book," says Moses.

"But they wasn't built of your kind of pumpkin pies!"

"No, they wasn't, but the men who built 'em was fed on my kind of pumpkin pies. I've got the figures right here of jest how much ginger was used every week. If it hadn't been fur ginger there'd hev been no pyramids; aever could hev been built on plain pumpkin pies in all this world."

"Maybe not," says Moses, "but them pyramids are no great shakes. Maybe you are aware that Christopher Columbus discovered America?"

"I've heard so."

"And what did he do it on?"

"Ambition."

"Not much! Adiniron Tompkins, I've got har's of proof right in my coatall pocket that he did it on pumpkin pies!"

"With ginger in 'em?"

"Not any—only plain."

"I don't believe it!"

"Then you're a mewl!"

"Don't call me a mewl!"

"And don't bristle up to me!"

Then of a sudden Moses went white in the face and took on a queer look, and purty soon it was found that he had a stroke of paralysis. They took him home, and he died that night, but afore passin' away he looked up at his wife in a way that meant plain pumpkin pies. Adiniron was jest used up over it. He no longer had any one to dispute with, and even lightning' rod men didn't seem to care a rap whether his pies were plain or gingered. It wasn't over a month before he was on his dyla' bed. He was conscious to the last, and the very last words he said was:

"Maria, I'm goin' to heaven to meet Moses Wheeler, and as there is no end to time up there I'm goin' to use up ten million years in convincin' Moses that pumpkin pies without ginger ain't fit for the hogs to eat!"

Their Love Letters

By EDITH V. ROSS

It is quite remarkable that so volatile a sensation as love can settle into so hunderm an affair as married life.

Nevertheless the two conditions are very different, and there is no doubt that love before marriage is like the whirl playing upon the strings of a harp, now blushing forth low, sweet sounds and now the wildest strains.

It is not only the greatness of these changes, but the suddenness. Take the case of Gus Pickering and Sara Travers for instance. They met at a barn dance and flew at each other as if drawn together by a pair of thousand volt magnets. Two days later they did not speak to each other when they met. In three more days they were engaged. Then they, being in different towns, began that voluminous letter writing which never has been and never can be equaled by any other correspondents than lovers. The letters that passed between them varied daily from one to five, the one representing ordinary conditions, the five when Gus wrote something Sara did not understand.

Alas, the day came when Gus perpetrated a joke in one of his letters that Sara did not understand, and she slapped his letter right back at him. Had he not been proud of his joke the affair might have passed like their thousand and one other spats. As it was, Gus wrote that since Sara had thought proper to return one of his letters she might return them all.

To this Sara replied that she was not so silly as to leave him in possession of her letters and if he wished his own the first thing for him to do was send every scrap she had ever written him. To this Gus replied that, since a great deal of gush had been written by both, perhaps it would be well for them to make an exchange. To this Sara agreed and said she awaited the return of his "gush" and would thereafter be careful how she wrote any more of it to any man.

A number of very short and pointed notes passed between them as to which should first return the other's letters, and no headway was made. Then Gus proposed that they should compromise the matter. "Certainly," was the reply. "I'm ready for a compromise."

"Well," Gus answered, "what shall the compromise be?"

"Why, you send back my letters, of course; then I'll send back yours."

About this time an acquaintance of Gus' was sued for breach of promise. This put an idea into his head. He had been making love to a girl he didn't know much about and he would not be surprised if she should sue him for breach of promise. If she did all that "gush" he had written would be read in open court. He fancied the guffaws of the lawyers, the jury and the spectators. It is very easy for a man to work himself into a panic, especially if he feels that he is in the hands of a woman who is ready to turn upon him. Gus climbed from one improbability to another till he fancied the girl he had thought he loved wouldn't scruple to do anything for revenge. And how could any one take a greater revenge than by giving up to be read to the world such expressions as "my own sweetest, dearest, darling puss?" Egh! How could he have been guilty of such folly anyway?

He thought of a great many ways to get his letters into his own possession, but this was a weak spot in all of them. Finally he proposed an exchange through a mutual friend. "Very well," was the reply. "We'll both give them to Madge Walker. She'll give you yours and me mine."

"I'm no such fool," he wrote, "as to place any confidence in one of the female sex. The go-between must be a man." This brought another check to the proceedings.

Finally it occurred to Gus that he might take Sara's letters to her and get his own in exchange. Singular, wasn't it, that he had not thought of this before? He wrote the girl he had wildly loved that he would take her letters to her and secure his own, after which there would be a parting between them that would last forever.

The spring was coming on, and the leaves were beginning to bud. The crocuses had already come up. The birds had begun to build their nests. These two haters who had been lovers agreed to meet in a wood back of the girl's home. Each appeared, bringing a huge bundle of letters. They met on a stile.

"Don't you think you owe me an apology?" said Sara.

"What for?"

"Why, that horrid thing you wrote me that caused all the trouble."

"What did I say?"

"Why, you said you said that—I can't remember what you said."

Gus thought he saw a tear standing in her eye. Dropping his bundle, he went to her, put his arms about her and kissed her.

But the letters. So engrossed were they with their makeup that they went away and forgot both bundles. Then along came uncouth boys, who, seeing the packages, took out and read a few of the letters. Not finding them interesting, they played football with the packages for awhile, then left them on the ground. That night a great storm sprang up, and the love letters of Gus Pickering and Sara Travers were scattered all over the country. For months kind friends were returning them from every quarter, and every return was not only mortifying, but heartrending.

Progress

Such are all the recent developments of the

Remington

(Visible Models 10 and 11)

Among these developments are:

The Built-in Decimal Tabulator—which makes the decimal tabulating mechanism an integral part of the typewriter.

The Tabulator Set Key—which eliminates all hand setting of the tabulator stops.

The Column Selector—which determines, by the stroke of a single key, the exact point on each line where the writing is to begin.

The Adding and Subtracting Remington (Wahl) Mechanism—which combines in one typewriter, and in one operation, the functions of the writing machine and the adding machine.

Every one of these new developments is an evidence of the perpetual leadership of the Remington Typewriter. Illustrated booklet descriptive of all recent Remington improvements, sent on request.

Our Cow Boy Herbaht.

Dakota Jack lived out west, and tried to do his best. As a cow boy galloping over the western plains. Nine years on the plains he spent. As in his saddle he went, and the knowledge of roots and herbs from the Indians gained.

CHORUS

I wish this world was full of just such men, I wish this world was full of just such men, His herbs is a dead shot and will reach the ailing spot, I wish this world was full of just such men.

In advertising on the street, every package he will receipt, To do you some good or no pay, And by the Herbs of the field, God said let the people be healed.

And Pursley's Herbs are proving it every day. Dr. Pursley is the first man to day, that ever sold this way. And give the people a square deal. And in his honest way.

I can truly say, he is a man of energy and zeal. If you have any ailments at all, Upon Pursley's herbs you must call, and give them a fair test. As for his soap and liniment I hope, Jack Pursley will tell you the rest. (Composed and sung by Sherley O. Estes.)

Woman's Study of Man.

That the race of husbands knows its wives may be doubted. That the race of wives knows its husbands is undoubted. The man goes dourishing forth on his path of many interests. The woman sits at home and broods over her single interest—the man. By dint of brooding she absorbs and accepts or rejects him. No man can hope to escape from the serious study of a woman, continued for sixteen hours daily. Every piece of evidence that her senses have observed is scrutinized, analyzed, classified. Her mind soaks the man as liquor soaks a lump of sugar. The sugar is dissolved; the man is solved. Most men, it is true, are simple enough. But the most complex men become simple when subjected to the concentrated and continued scrutiny of brooding woman. They are cooked with the dinner; they are washed up with the up with the children's pinafores. From that prolonged dissection no man's anatomy can hide its secrets.—Bookfellow (N. S. W.).

"Living Their Parts."

A good deal is said from time to time about an actor living his part. In the course of some remarks on this subject Walter Pritchard Eaton, in the American Magazine, tells the following:

"Once a great actor as Brutus in 'Julius Caesar' cried to a second great actor, as Cassius,

"Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this,"

"and pressed a plug of tobacco into his palm. Sarah Bernhardt, on a wager, once played a fearful and stirring scene in an American theater, reciting instead of the words of the play an impromptu tirade against American hotels, and the audience—all save a few who could understand her rapid fire French—were duly carried away. It is even recorded that many women wept. Sarah was most assuredly not 'living the life' of her stage character then, yet her acting remained effective, and no one has yet denied that she knows how to act."

Nicknames.

"Where did you get that knife?" asked Willie's mother.

"I traded a top to Puppy Johnson for it."

"What—that Puppy Johnson with whom I saw you playing a little while ago?"

"No; that was Piggie Davis."

"Dear me! What dreadful names! Come here. How did you get that tear in your coat?"

"I caught it on a nail when me and Ratty Robinson were makin' it up this mornin'."

"Mercy! I don't want you to have anything to do with those boys any more. Their families must be low or they wouldn't have such names. How in the world did they ever get them?"

"I don't know. They call me Pimple Keenworth because one day I went to school with a pimple on my nose."—Chicago Herald.

"Our Personal Guarantee to all Skin Sufferers" Lancaster.

We have been in business in this town for some time, and we are looking to build up trade by always advising our patrons right.

So when we tell you that we have found the eczema remedy and that we stand back of it with the manufacturer's iron clad guarantee, backed by ourselves you can depend upon it that we give our advice not in order to sell a few bottles of medicine to skin sufferers, but because we know how it will help our business if we help our patrons.

We keep in stock and sell all the well known skin remedies. But we will say this: If you are suffering from any kind of skin trouble, eczema, psoriasis, rash or better, we want you to try a full size bottle of D. D. D. Prescription, and, if it does not do the work, this bottle will cost you nothing. You alone to judge.

Again and again we have seen how a few drops of this simple wash applied to the skin, takes away the itch, instantly. And the cure all seem to be permanent.

D. D. D. Prescription made by the D. D. D. Laboratories of Chicago, is composed of thymol, glycerine, oil of wintergreen and other healing, soothing, cooling ingredients. And if you are just crazy with itch, you will feel soothed and cooled, the itch absolutely washed away the moment you applied this D. D. D.

We have made fast friends of more than one family by recommending this remedy to a skin sufferer here and there and we want you to try it now on our positive no-pay guarantee.

Song Recital Given By Miss Jo-Hord Frank A Success In Every Particular.

The recital of Miss Jo-Hord Frank given at the school auditorium served to introduce Lancaster to one of her most distinguished daughters in the capacity of a singer. Rarely have audiences been so enthusiastic and no artist who has been heard here has been more entirely satisfactory in every particular.

Miss Frank is a young woman of handsome stage presence, beautiful voice, and mentality to grasp every demand of vocal art. Her first group of songs opened with "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" by Hayden, which at once placed her thoroughly on rapport with her audience, and her rendition of "O! My Heart is Weary" by Thomas won her a tremendous ovation.

The beauty of her contralto voice, with its mezzo quality, and the art which enables her to color every phase and portray every emotion was displayed in songs by Schumann and Brahms. In writing of the voice, art and personality of Miss Frank, one can only echo the verdict of those who heard her last evening. She is an artist. She delivers her musical message as convincingly and perfectly as possible. Her personality conveys the same impression. Her face mirrors every mood of the song she sings, and her sweet womanliness and dignity add immeasurably to the charm of her work. Her flawless technique, style and enunciation carried joy to every one.

The large audience which heard Miss Frank recalled her again and again and compelled her to sing a number of encores, even until she sang the beautiful closing song "I Love You Truly." The sentiment was intensely appropriate and as she left the stage she carried all hearts with her.

The singer received beautiful flowers, testimonials of not only the esteem in which she is held, but showing the love for her mother and lamented father.

Miss Minnie Walsh was her accompanist which means it was done perfectly. Miss Walsh also gave a piano solo which was received with the enthusiastic applause her playing always brings forth from a Lancaster audience.

Mr. J. E. Robinson introduced Miss Frank in the following words, which at the very earnest solicitation of both Miss Jo-Hord Frank and Mrs. Frank are reproduced with this article.

Ladies and Gentlemen:- So long as we have the power of thought we shall honor the memory of Joseph Frank. In this instance no need of tablets or epitaphs for his unselfish Christian life in this midst and his family and encourage work for his county, his fellow man and his God, serves to keep living the sweet recollections of this blessed man. Sympathetic and anxious hearts have followed the fortunes of these loved ones he left behind through all the trying years, that God will take care of his own. The companion of his life is here tonight with his child to receive the full price of a brave mother's victory, and this generous people are thier happy to help fill her cup of joy full to overflowing. The hallowed memories of the past blend with this her triumphant victory to make a happy meeting of old neighbors, friends and loved ones. There are no critics here to-night friends. Every note of the singer will be received with pride, and in happy appreciation of a loving mother's sacrifice and a noble father's beneficent work. My dear young lady the old home with its tenderest memories and its highest hopes greet you and bid your fortune fair as you embark upon your promising and hopeful voyage. She is no stranger from a distant isle or foreign shore, but your own gifted daughter that I present; your own dear child in whom nature has planted a spark of genius; back to the threshold where first the light of heaven was open to her, where the first childish note was sung, and of all the world the folks at home she wishes to entertain first with her enchanting voice. It is my pleasure to present and I know your joy to greet Miss Jo-Hord Frank.

Curry Robinson Leaves For Washington.

Mr. Curry Robinson left Monday for Washington D. C., where through the instrumentality of Congressman Helm, he has been appointed to a lucrative position in the pension department. Curry is a promising young man, well qualified, having just completed a course at the State College in Lexington and will surely give a good account of himself in Washington, and we expect to see him rapidly climb the ladder until he attains one of the highest positions in his department.

Beazley Bros. Receive Top Price For Best Bunch Of Export Cattle In The State.

Messrs W. S. and R. A. Beazley of Lexington (our "Tony and Dick") on last Monday sold to Monte Fox of Danville for Armour & Co a bunch consisting of 187 export cattle at 84 cents per pound; the cattle will weigh 1500 lbs. are to be delivered early in July and are considered the best exporters in Kentucky. Beazley Bros. until very recently lived in Garrard county, and it was here they made their maiden efforts in the raising of exporters, and it was ever their aim and pride to have them "just a little better than anybody else's", and upon their removal to Fayette county, where they purchased one of the best farms in that county, they continued their efforts along the same line, and how well they have succeeded it told in the preceding paragraph.

Not Unlucky For Major Burnside.

Maj. James A. Burnside who is a firm believer in signs, omens and such, has had one of his pet theories shattered. Because of a press of work in his garden lately, the Major has neglected to study his almanac as attentively as is his custom, and he failed to take note of the fact that a week ago today was the 13th day of the month of the year 1913, and falling on Friday, and according to his code was the most unlucky day possible, and nothing of any moment should be attempted on that day, in fact to use a common expression you should sit around and "watch yourself" until the unlucky day had passed.

A few days previous the assistant editor of the Record had informed the Major where several "big uns" used, and he went after them on that hitherto considered unlucky day, and listen all you superstitious people, he came back with bacon, caught six nice bass weighing from 14 to 34 pounds. The Major has as yet vouchsafed no satisfactory reason why this happened.

Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign Gains 50 Per Cent.

National Directory Supplement Shows rapid Advance Of Movement.

An index of the remarkable growth of the anti-tuberculosis movement in the United States is given in a pamphlet published today by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which shows that the number of agencies engaged in the fight against consumption in the United States numbered over 2,500 in May 1st, 1913, as contrasted to about 1,500 two years ago; a gain of 50 per cent.

The pamphlet is a supplement to the Tuberculosis Directory issued by The National Association in April, 1911. The supplement contains a list of all agencies established since that date, nearly 1,000 in all. The growth on some of the principal forms of anti-tuberculosis activity is summarized in the following table:

Established before	Year	Ass'n's	Sanatoria & Hospitals	Dispensaries	Open air Schools.
" during	1905	19	115	18
" "	1906	15	19	6
" "	1907	18	16	14
" "	1908	46	30	45	1
" "	1909	109	46	119	2
" "	1910	169	68	59	10
" "	1911	222	72	63	17
" "	1912	312	61	34	57
" to May 1st,	1913	293	42	25	55
		125	58	12	35
		1228	527	395	177

New York State leads with the largest number of new organizations and institutions established in the two years while Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois vie for second and third honors. Mississippi, Texas, Alabama, and Arkansas, each of them show marked increase in new activities, where two years ago little anti-tuberculosis work was being done.

With the sanatoria and hospitals already in operation and those for which definite provision has been made, the number of beds for consumptives has increased from 26,000 to over 22,000, an increase of 57 per cent.

"Cured"

Mrs. Jay McGee, of Stephenville, Texas, writes: "For nine (9) years, I suffered with womanly trouble, I had terrible headaches, and pains in my back, etc. It seemed as if I would die, I suffered so. At last, I decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and it helped me right away. The full treatment not only helped me, but it cured me."

TAKE Cardui The Woman's Tonic

Cardui helps women in time of greatest need, because it contains ingredients which act specifically, yet gently, on the weakened womanly organs. So, if you feel discouraged, blue, out-of-sorts, unable to do your household work, on account of your condition, stop worrying and give Cardui a trial. It has helped thousands of women,—why not you? Try Cardui. E-71

Valued Dogs Killed.

The Record has along with numerous other newspapers of the state frequently been very outspoken against "worthless curs" and by this expression we meant the half starved, often vicious animals which roam at will through the streets, committing depredations here, there and everywhere, frequently attacking flocks of sheep, and in fact being a general menace to the community. Never did we intend to refer to the many dogs which are really valuable. Dog is man's best friend, and one oftentimes becomes deeply attached to a small cur that in the eyes of many is utterly worthless, he will pay his tax, feed him, even fight for him. Several dogs of the latter type have met untimely deaths in Lancaster recently. Someone has been scattering "buttons" indiscriminately, and several highly prized canines have made their last meal thereof. Mayor Logan lost a highly prized animal, Councilman Parker Gregory one, H. D. Tomlinson one, Henry Simpson one, Ollie Reid one and Miss Patsy Anderson another. Should the miscreant who scattered the doses of poison be found out, he will come in for some severe handling at the hands of the law, for a dog upon which the tax has been paid is personal property, and subject to legal protection. However, we had much rather fall into the clutches of the law than to face the ire of some of the worthy ladies who are bemoaning the loss of a favorite pet.

To The Public.

The epidemic of Catarrhal Fever has fallen more heavily upon me perhaps than upon any individual in the county, however, it is useless to mourn over what cannot be helped. My stable has been thoroughly fumigated and disinfected according to the directions of both state and National veterinarians, and under the supervision and to the satisfaction of our county Live Stock Inspector, and has been pronounced by him and also by local veterinarians as being perfectly free from any kind of disease and sanitary in every respect, and there is ABSOLUTELY NO DANGER of contracting disease about my premises. My stock are all well and those that were last sick have been taken entirely away from the stable, so that there is no possibility of my customers allowing their stock to come in contact with diseased stock by patronizing my barn.

When the disease first made its appearance, and without any orders or quarantine from any authority or individual. I closed my barn to the public; not for my own protection, for my own stock had already been exposed to the disease, but for the protection of my friends and patrons and to prevent them from bringing their stock to my barn and taking a chance on their being exposed.

I am now again open for business, and I am as frank to tell you that there is absolutely no danger in patronizing my barn, and I will be glad to see all of my old friends and patrons and as many new ones as may care to come. Thanking you for your business in the past soliciting your future favors, I am, Yours truly, J. T. Raney.

Deserving Testimonials.

The following is a testimonial given to Miss Jo-Hord Frank by her teacher Charles N. Granville, of New York who was soloist and created much enthusiasm in "The Rose Maiden" at the Lexington May Festival also was heard with much pleasure in our neighboring town of Danville.

This is to certify that Miss Jo-Hord Frank has studied with me during the entire season of 1912-13 and has been especially prepared with a view to teaching. Miss Frank possesses a voice of lovely quality and I have found her unusually studious and intelligent. She is well grounded in the fundamental principles of tone production and should prove a valuable acquisition to any institution requiring her services.

(Signed) Charles N. Granville, P. S.

Miss Frank, in addition to many standard secular songs, has prepared a number of sacred songs for use in church work for which she is well equipped.

(Signed) C. N. G.
Miss Frank was so well received in church concerts in Richmond Va., that she has about decided to do concert or Chautauque work although as you see from her recommendation she specialized with a view of teaching. The following is an extract from one of her churches in Richmond Va.

The recital given at seventh street Christian church by Miss Jo-Hord Frank, a pupil of Charles N. Granville of New York was greatly appreciated by all who heard her. Miss Frank has a full rich contralto voice with a wonderful range of two octaves which shows supreme training. So perfect is her expression and plain her enunciation that she carried her audience with her from the "Lavender Fields" of England to the land of the Fairy Pipers. She came to Richmond a stranger and won a large place for herself by her rare talent and wonderful personality. The musicians of Richmond feel that they have enjoyed a treat.

THE FORCE OF CONSCIENCE

By DONALD CHAMBERLAIN

"This man Velliers, I understand, has found another victim. This is the eleventh notch he has made on his stick."

"What victim?"

"This time it is a countryman of yours—one Arthur Whitney." "Arthur Whitney?"

This brief dialogue occurred in Paris between a Parisian and a South Carolinian named Louis Glenwood. The time was before the middle of the nineteenth century, when dueling was more common than now throughout the world and far more in earnest in France, where a semblance of the custom still lingers. Glenwood had no special acquaintance with Whitney, only knowing him as the affianced husband of Muriel Ellison, an American girl whom he, Glenwood, secretly adored.

"Some one must stop these murders," he said with intense emotion. "That cannot be done," replied the other; "at least, not in any ordinary way—not by the duel, because Velliers is so skilled in all weapons that he can defeat any antagonist. There is but one way in which he can be worsted—through his nerve. If one could find a way to break through that Velliers' skill would not be available."

A few days later Velliers was dining at a cafe on the Champs Elysees when a man entered who attracted attention at once from a malicious, sardonic look he wore on his face. He strode straight toward the table where Velliers was sitting and deliberately slipped him on the cheek.

Velliers, who had noticed the man, looked up into the face of one whom he had never seen before and whose expression startled him.

"What means this insult, monsieur?" he asked. "I do not know that I have any quarrel with you."

"You are used, monsieur," said the other, "to offer these insults. I choose to offer this one myself."

"Who are you?"

"I am the united embodiment of all your victims, and I have come to make you my victim."

While the speaker's eyes showed different emotions, his face retained the same invariable sardonic expression. "Very well, monsieur," he said. "Will you kindly refer me to any friend of yours who will receive a message from me in your behalf?"

"Friend? Are not we—those you have killed—La Tour, Desmoulin, Mercier, La Rognie and the others, including your last victim, the American—all my seconds? Come, monsieur, I have arranged for a private room in the fencing academy of M. Meyden. Let us proceed there."

"But there is the selection of weapons, besides other terms to be settled. As the challenged party you have the right to choose."

"Terms! Weapons! Do the dead need to dispute about such things? They are for you to decide, not us."

"Us?"

"Yes; you are to fight a representative, not an individual. But we will not waste words. Come; let us be off."

Velliers rose, and the stranger slipped his arm through that of his antagonist, keeping his face turned toward him all the while. Velliers shook him off, but the stranger walked beside him, those who had been dining with the latter following, to the fencing academy, where they were shown into a private room. Velliers chose fells, and the fight began.

By this time the duelist showed signs of unsteadiness. The stranger's confidence, his indifference as to terms and weapons, his talk about representing Velliers' victims, and, above all, his sardonic smile, had produced an effect. The duelist, as soon as he began to fence, strove not to look at his opponent. But he must keep his eyes on that of his antagonist, and he could not do this without the smile being constantly before him. Indeed, do what he would, it drew his sight from that feature on which he relied for his life depended. The unknown, observing this, waited till his enemy's gaze was diverted, then made a quick lunge and ran him through the breast.

The next morning all Paris knew that the famous Velliers had been killed in a duel by an American named Glenwood. But few knew that Glenwood had relied almost entirely on breaking down his antagonist's nerve through his conscience. The South Carolinian's face had been painted by a skilled artist and so delicately done that the paint could not easily be discovered. It was assurance backed by this device that enabled Glenwood to rid the world of the duelist.

Miss Ellison, who had gone into mourning for her lover, was one of the first to hear of this remarkable duel. When she learned the name of the conqueror her surprise was great indeed. He had long been her friend—a sort of brother—but she would not have expected him to endanger his life to avenge her. She sent for him to come to her at once.

"Why did you do it?" she asked. "Do not ask me now," was the reply; "some time in the future I may tell you."

"Suppose your effort to work on the man's nerves had failed?"

"I should have been another victim." Miss Ellison never asked again why she had been avenged. Glenwood could not conceal it from her. Within a year after the duel they were married.

Native American Products.
Tea is grown nowhere else in America but in South Carolina, so a box of native tea would be unique, and even cotton bolls are fascinating to those who are not accustomed to them. Florida has its quarts furnished by nature. Guavas, limes and kumquats are all desirable as gifts, either in their state or preserved. Alligator pears, mangoes or even chayotes are the greatest rarity in northern markets.

TWO KINDS OF FOLKS.

While being satisfied with one's own possessions—and things are often carried to the point where they are either ludicrous or offensive—there are many folk who would not only be a good deal happier, but would amount to a good deal more in the world, if they felt more pride in their own achievements and a greater satisfaction with and contentment in their own possessions.

be it houses, lands, wives, husbands, children or wearing apparel. We know a farmer who thinks Neighbor Jones' farmstead is a whole lot better than his own. If this is a fact it is because Neighbor Jones has also entertained this same opinion for some time and has taken steps to bring this condition about. Before Brown's place it is the first named is going to undergo much improvement the owner, like Jones, will have to have some conception of its possibilities and take definite steps to carry these possibilities into effect. We know another man, a townsman, who thinks his house (it is a four room affair) is the best place there is in town. He entertains the same notion about his wife and children (and he can justly be proud of them). The result is that in this home there are harmony, good will, a pride in the family name and, withal, happiness. Again, the writer knows several women who will spend all the way from ten to a hundred dollars for a coat or suit and make life miserable for their dress-makers while they are being made, but who, if they happen to see some other women wearing a suit no prettier, no better fitting and costing no more, but of a little different color or cut, are straightway miserable and dissatisfied with their own outfits. This frame of mind in man or woman is an unfortunate one to have or cultivate. Sometimes it is due to a species of selfishness, but as often to focusing one's attention on things that are in a measure quite transient and nonessential.

KILLING SPARROWS.

If the sparrows are getting to be a good deal of a nuisance on the farm there are several ways of getting rid of them. Poisoned wheat is sometimes used, but this plan has the drawback of rendering likely the poisoning of other fowl about the place. Another plan that is excellent is a trap consisting of a box open on one side and five or six feet square and about a foot deep. One edge of this should be propped up at short distance, the support being so arranged that it can be pulled away at a moment's notice by a string leading to the hand of the watcher, who should be in a place of concealment. The sparrows are likely to be wary of this trap at first, and for this reason it should be left in position for several days to encourage them to go under it. Wheat or chick feed should be scattered under it several evenings just before the birds go to roost. On a later evening when they are under it the trap may be sprung. Another plan is to feed the sparrows by scattering grain in a straight line from some good point of concealment where one may get a head on a flock of the birds with a shotgun loaded with fine bird shot. Still another excellent method for preventing an increase in the sparrow tribe is the breaking up of the nests as fast as they are made. All of the birds killed, except those poisoned, are good eating, even if it does take a good many of them to make a stew.

ABOUT TULIPS.

At this writing (April 8) the writer's home (and business office) is graced with some thrifty tulips whose lovely bloom is most welcome when there are no blossoms out of doors and everything is rough and bleak. Some of the bulbs that were planted in shallow boxes got too dry during their stay in the cellar and did not root properly and hence did not amount to much. The rest, in deeper boxes and pots, that had all the moisture they needed, have been a very delight. Shortly after they were brought upstairs the bulbs were given a thorough watering with a solution made by pouring a couple of gallons of water on to a small quantity of nearly fresh horse manure. Next winter we shall see that all the boxes are kept sufficiently moist and will give them a good soaking when put in the cellar with this same fertilizer solution, which will be available when the bulbs are making root. Of the single varieties, the one made the La Reine (yellow), Yellow Prince (yellow), Queen of the Netherlands (pink) and Craniole Brilliant (red) very satisfactory, while the Double Rubra Maxim (red), Couronne d'Or (orange) and Muriel (pink) are all that could be desired. These bulbous plants are as easy to raise as onions, and no home should be without a few of them for the winter and early spring months.

A MUCH NEEDED LAW.

A federal law which will protect all migratory wild fowl and useful insect eating birds, such as the robin, which spend the summer in northern states and winters in the south, is now a fact. The government in the law referred to assumes control over these birds on the same ground that it controls interstate traffic and communication. The law in question is one that has long been needed to prevent the wanton slaughter of our best song birds, and that it is to be enforced will be a matter of congratulation on the part of all who have any adequate conception of the service which bird life renders to the agricultural and horticultural interests of the country.

Ulcers And Skin Troubles.

GOOD WORK OF CANNING CLUBS

Girls and Women Taught to Save Vegetables.

AIDED BY THE GOVERNMENT.

Experts Furnished to Give Instruction in Scientific Canning While Kentucky Agricultural Department Loans Modern Outfits—Women Are Also Showing Interest in the Work.

The garden behind each and every farmhouse produces each summer more vegetables than the family can use. When winter comes the farmer and his family have to buy canned tomatoes, peas, corn and beans at the cross roads store.

The Girls' Canning clubs that the United States government is developing in nine counties in Kentucky this summer are part of a huge movement to check this huge loss in fine food and money that totals millions annually. Besides the saving in money there is another point which is commonly overlooked. In canning vegetables that are home grown the housewife is sure she has a first class article.

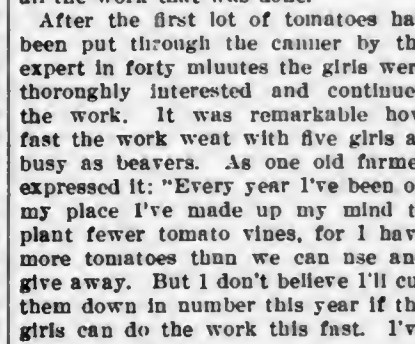

That the work may be done in the best possible manner, the United States government is furnishing experts to demonstrate this home canning work. The state agricultural department is loaning each of the nine counties a home canning outfit, and the counties themselves are furnishing interested teachers, parents and wide awake country girls to form the clubs. In Jefferson county clubs have been developed at Valley Station, O'Bannon's and Okolona. During the latter part of May the government expert gave three demonstrations. Of course there were no ripe tomatoes or beans in the country that early in the season, so they were bought in the city and taken to the schoolhouses where the clubs were to meet. Besides the girls who were members of the clubs, many mothers and interested housekeepers came and brought their dishes so they might get the benefit of all the work that was done.

After the first lot of tomatoes had been put through the canner by the expert in forty minutes the girls were thoroughly interested and continued the work. It was remarkable how fast the work went with five girls as busy as beavers. As one old farmer expressed it: "Every year I've been on my place I've made up my mind to plant fewer tomato vines, for I have more tomatoes than we can use and give away. But I don't believe I'll cut them down in number this year if the girls can do the work this fast. I've

O'BANNON'S CANNING CLUB.

Just been figuring on it a little bit, and this little canner that'll set on top of a one burner gasoline or coal oil stove will can sixteen quarts of tomatoes every three-quarters of an hour. That is 208 quarts in a ten hour day."

"Yes," remarked one of the housekeepers, "and the great beauty of it is with the temperature you can get it one of these canners, you can can any thing and be sure of its being perfect ly sterile. You don't have to use any thing with beans, for instance, but a pinch of salt and a little water."

"Well, it took a long time to get the old mothers in this part of the country to use thermometers to test their cream before churning, and I reckon it'll take some time to get them to use modern canners with thermometers so they will be certain of results in canning."
